Lecture Title: Knowledge, Truth and Technological Change

Abstract:
In this introductory lecture I briefly overview some current accounts of Knowledge and Truth, stress the epistemic significance of Justification and demonstrate with an elementary mathematical example the mutual dependence of propositional knowledge-that and procedural knowledge-how. I use this basic conceptual framework for describing relationships between Science and Technology and in this context focus more specifically on today's Information Technology.