

Can Logic be possibly useful in Science?

In my talk I'll overview some past and some recent attempts to apply logical methods in science, and try to outline some directions for future research. More specifically I'll focus on the Justification Logic and akin logical approaches based on Type theory, and show their relevance in prospective Knowledge Representation techniques.